ABSTRACT

This paper attempts to study the issue of multiculturalism between the ideology of religion and political theorizing by bringing the meaning of multiculturalism closer together by examining the problematic of the term. The paper concludes that multiculturalism is a political theory that has not been agreed upon as a well-defined term, but in any case does not imply complete neutrality. Therefore, it can be utilized according to the guidelines of Islamic thought, as well as the great challenges facing Arab and Islamic States and the problems of identity and citizenship, and how a formula for coexistence can be reached. Multiculturalism is one of its most important mechanisms.
